O uso de enxerto de veia safena “no touch” na cirurgia de revascularização miocárdica
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Vein mapping

Department of Cardiothoracic surgery, Örebro University Hospital, Sweden
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Vein being exposed
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Vein being removed from its bed

Department of Cardiothoracic surgery, Örebro University Hospital, Sweden
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Vein is left in situ after harvesting

Department of Cardiothoracic surgery, Örebro University Hospital, Sweden
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

The surrounding tissue is held during the anastomoses
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Checking for leakage
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

Vein grafts being perfused before doing the proximal anastomoses

Department of Cardiothoracic surgery, Örebro University Hospital, Sweden
Important surgical aspects of the "no touch" technique

The closure of the wound
"No touch" technique for saphenous vein harvesting